

Bonnie: (37, White)

Bonnie was once delicate and beautiful, but 10 years of vicodin addiction hardened her. She holed up in her house during the first days of the apocalypse and expected to ride it out in a drug fugue before she was found and helped by an older couple, Leland and Dee. She's fallen in love with Leland.

She's done more than a few bad things in her day.

- Bitter from years of poverty and drug addiction
- Speaks with a soft Georgia accent
- Selfish, but not mean

Bonnie flirts with Leland. Both know that Leland's wife could come by at any moment.

LELAND

You know I was thinking a couple of us, you know...you, me, and...whoever...could try fishing in that pond out by the camp. Maybe next week sometime? Couple days?

BONNIE

[flattered] That sounds like fun. Maybe we could take some food up there, have ourselves a picnic.

LELAND

Great. [bashful] So, uh. It's a date, then. (beat) Can I ask you a question?

BONNIE

Ask me anything you want, Leland. Ain't like I can hide from you out here.

LELAND

[uncertain] How are you? I know it ain't really my place to ask, I just figured—

BONNIE

It's fine, Leland, really. Don't get so worried about it.
(beat)

It ain't been easy, that's for sure. But y'all have been great about everything, and I ain't feeling quite so much like I need the pills no more, so there's that.

Bonnie just accidentally bashed Dee, her romantic rival, in the face. She's distraught over it.

BONNIE

[did something horrible] Dee, oh god, Dee...I'm--I'm so sorry oh GOD...

BONNIE

[whispering] Why didn't you say anything? You should've SAID something!
